

Peter McInnis

Chair, CAUT Academic Freedom & Tenure Committee

Peter S. McInnis is a historian specializing in labour and working-class studies. He has researched and published on the development of the Canadian 'postwar compromise' between 1945-1975, and the rise of wildcat strikes and union militancy during the 1960s. Prior to joining the CAUT Executive Committee, he was president of his faculty association during the 2013 strike which centred on workplace equity. A long-time member of the editorial board for Labour/Le Travail, McInnis remains actively involved in labour studies and issues related to democratic governance in post-secondary education.
